Since the economic and financial crisis, the scope and dimension of Sino-European relations have deepened. Indeed, not only do China and the European Union have important trade relations but they also now have a common interest in promoting a dynamic, sustainable and balanced development of the global economy.

The objective of this symposium is to consider the modalities of further cooperation between China and the countries of the European Union in three areas: the correction of global imbalances, financial regulation and openness to foreign investment. For each of these themes, the symposium will provide an opportunity for European and Chinese officials, scholars and business representatives to have extensive discussions on issues relating to the financing of economies.
